After 30 years, Denver not bothered about 'Gilligan' tag

By Tom Hultman

Bob Denver has been Gilligan for more than 30 years now.

One would think that he would have had his proverbial fill of that skinny, bumbling fool who couldn't seem to do anything right on that tiny little island in the Pacific Ocean.

"People are always asking me, 'Does it bother you?' Absolutely not," he said in his 1993 book, Gilligan, Maynard and Me.

Of course, with the popularity of the show and its 30-plus-year run in sydication, the average couch potato believes that Denver, Dawn Wells, Russell Johnson, Tina Louise and the rest of the cast's estates are rolling in the cash from the residuals.

You couldn't be further from the truth, according to Denver.

"None of the cast makes any money from the reruns," he said in the book. "We were paid off in two years. But in 1963, no one could foresee the syndication market. By the early 1980s, I estimated that the show had grossed over a billion dollars, and it keeps rolling on.

"Seriously, the fans more than make up for the loss of money. In all the years it's been on, no one has come up to me with anything less than a big grin and a thank you. It makes me feel good. The fans have always been the same – the only slight change being after 20 years, the ones in their 70s and 80s wanted the autograph for themselves, instead of for their kids or grandchildren.

"More than anything else, I guess I hear, 'I ran home from school every day and turned it on.' I've found that being a good childhood memory is very rewarding."

The 62-year-old Denver, who also appeared in the 1950s and '60s hit TV series "Dobie Gillis," recently moved from the video side of things into radio.

He has teamed with his wife, Dreama, for the two-hour "Weekend with Denver and Denver" radio show, which will feature oldies music, celebrity interviews, comedy and show business news.

Not forgetting his former "Gilligan's Island" castmates, Denver has brought back Wells (Mary Ann), who will host a "Hooray for Hollywood" segment, and Johnson (Professor), who will answer questions from the Denvers and listeners.

The radio show will be broadcast initially on stations in West Virginia. It is scheduled to go nationwide in a few months.

Denver said he was hooked on the Gilligan character the minute he discussed the possible series with creator Sherwood Schwartz in the fall of 1963.

Schwartz wanted a Robinson Crusoe-type of show, with a slapstick comedy edge.

"I really wanted to do all those old slapstick sight gags," Denver said in his book. "For some reason they attracted me, maybe because they had to be timed perfectly. They never seemed to go out of style."

If anything, the team of Denver and Hale as Gilligan and Skipper was a slapstick team cut out of the Laurel and Hardy mold.

"As I look back on those years working with Alan, I realize more and more, it was a special time," Denver said in his book. "We had great fun together, and he made the work seem easy. He brings a smile to my face even now."

The slapstick routines and the cartoon-like atmosphere of "Gilligan's Island" must have worked during its three-season (1964-67) run on CBS, as it was constantly in the Top 10 in the weekly Nielsen ratings.

In fact, the "Gilligan" cast was signed up for the fourth season when CBS' head of programming William Paley noticed that his favorite show, "Gunsmoke," wasn't on the fall schedule.

When Paley saw "Gilligan" in the "Gunsmoke" slot on Monday night, he quickly axed the castaways.

"After three years as one of the most popular shows, we were given the heave-ho to keep Bill and Babe Paley happy with Marshall Dillon and Kitty," Denver said. "That's show biz. It was time to try new things anyway."

The cancellation left millions of fans all over the world with 98 episodes, two animated spinoffs – "New Adventures of Gilligan's Island" (1974-76) and "Gilligan's Planet" (1983-84) – and three movies – "Rescue from Gilligan's Island" in 1978, "Castaways on Gilli-

1965 Topps card

Bob Denver (above) has teamed up with his wife, Dreama, and his "Gilligan's Island" castmates Dawn Wells and Russell Johnson for an oldies radio show.

The SS Minnow was purchased at a Honolulu boatyard. The 35-foot cabin cruiser had nothing wrong with it, except a seized engine. The persons in charge of finding a boat for the show purchased the boat and began hammering away on it with sledgehammers until two large holes were formed. The boat is now resting in a boatyard in Long Beach, Calif. (Photos courtesy of Dart Flipcards) gan's Island" in 1979 and "Harlem Globetrotters on Gilligan's Island" in 1981 – to view over and over again.

It also opened the doors for Dart Flipcards to produce a card set based on the classic TV show.

It is the first card set based on "Gilligan's Island" since Topps produced a 55-card issue in 1965.

Dart's 72-card set will feature a six-card chase set and randomly inserted autographs of Tina Louise and, most likely, other cast members.

It is odd that Louise, who played Ginger, has loaned her signature to the set. After all, she has distanced herself from the show for the past three decades. If you remember, she was the only original cast member to not return for the three movies.

"She never really got over being stereotyped as Ginger," Denver said. "She always thought it kept her from getting better roles. She still doesn't talk about the show much with any degree of humor."

Speaking of autographs, Denver, Wells and Johnson usually do two or three personal appearances per year.

"In all the years I've signed (autographs), not one person has been rude or negative," Denver said. "One mother of a 4-year-old girl told me her daughter always came in from playing outside at four in the afternoon to watch the show.

"The mom asked her how she knew it was on, since she couldn't tell time. She said that when the sun touched the top of the big tree, she knew it was time for 'Giggle'ns Island.'"

Even today there's plenty of time to sit right back and hear a tale...

MARKET REPORT

By Kurt Samuels

Error cards making their way back into entertainment hobby

Babylon 5's Mira Furlan card, Frank the dog from 'MiB' set latest in cards mistakenly put in press run

With an ever shrinking entertainment card market, sharp-minded executives and marketers need to devise new and exciting plans to attract consumers to their products.

Either that or the companies' spin doctors can manipulate the market with a gimmick.

Intentionally or not, the second is the option of choice, with both Fleer/SkyBox and Inkworks having difficulties in their production and collation of cards.

The item getting the most intention is a special Mira Furlan card that was produced, but was not to be included in the release of Fleer/SkyBox's Babylon Special Edition cards in July.

The card shows a picture of the actress on the front and some biographical information of her on the card's back.

According to Fleer/SkyBox's Steve Charendoff, the cards was created specially for Furlan to use at her discretion. But because of the logistics of printing, "a few hundred" mistakenly made it into the production run, he said.

The special Furlan card has caused a stir among card collectors and Babylon 5 fans, especially those with access to the internet (which spits out more misinformation than the former Soviet Union news agency TASS).

As interest and curiosity spread, so did many rumors. One has a phony memo being sent to various places about a possible deal with a national retailers wanting these cards.

A second has Furlan allegedly selling the cards herself for $35 each. None of the rumors could be confirmed.

"Some dealers and collectors thought the card was a replacement for the autographed card because they would break down a case and not get one but would have this card instead," Charendoff said. "It went in place of any other card that was to go in there. It didn't replace the autographed card."

This is the front of the Fleer/SkyBox Babylon 5 Mira Furlan card that was produced for Furlan's personal use. However, a few hundred of the cards mistakenly made it into the production run. The cards have been selling for $75 in some markets.

It really doesn't matter which card it replaced, what matters to Babylon 5 collectors and followers, is that the card is out there.

To get it, fans are paying big bucks or more for the card. To Stephen Smith, a freelance writer who wrote the text for the three Babylon 5 sets, this is wrong.

He made this known to entertainment card dealer Bob Manwaring of Warp 9 Non-Sport Cards in Victoria, British Columbia, Canada.

"When I see people trying to rip off fans for $75 for a card Mira is giving away for free, when I see people accusing Fleer/SkyBox of some conspiracy to defraud collectors, I'm going to speak up and say so," he wrote via the Internet.

"I'm totally outraged," Manwaring said. "We sold four of these cards at $75 each and my customers were very pleased to obtain it."

Charendoff, who seemed worn out by the problems this card has caused, tried to put a positive spin on the situation.

"One one hand, you always want people talking about you," he said.

They are.

Inkworks, on the other hand, beats out Fleer/SkyBox in total number of miscues. For the second time this year, Inkworks has had production difficulties. It began with the James Bond Connoisseur's Collection II series in February. A platinum chase card, which was produced as part of a test run, made its way into the set.

Now in July, an error card entered the print run of "Men In Black."

According to the company, an image featuring Frank the Dog was "mysteriously" (Inkworks' words) missing from card No. 87. The company thought it corrected the image prior to production.

However, the error card did make it into production and into some packs. However, unlike Fleer/SkyBox which seems apologetic for making the mistake, Inkworks has put a spin on both situations to turn a problem into a profit.

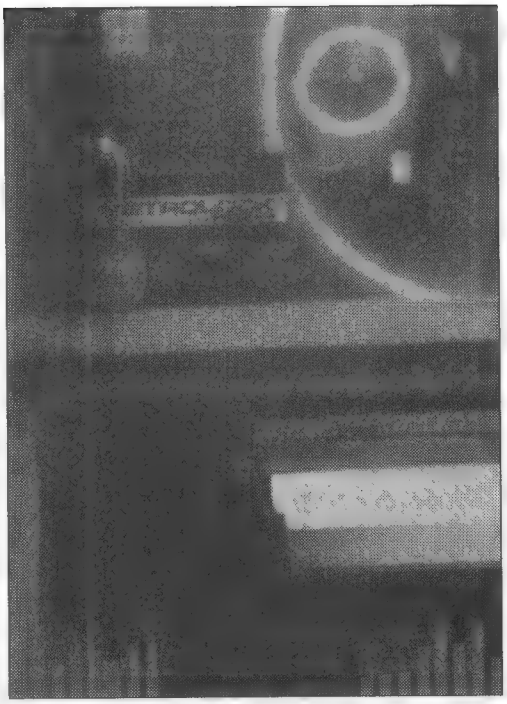
This is from the two Inkworks press releases on the subjects in question.

James Bond: "This mistake is the fans' and collectors' bonus – these are the ultimate collectible" and "It's easily becoming one of the most sought after cards and James Bond collectible of the last few years. Fans might never get this opportunity again. Only Inkworks lets collectors and fans turn gold into platinum."

Men In Black: "We want to be fair to collectors. If they get an (error) card, they can forward it to us and we will replace it immediately. Ironically, as is often seen in this industry, those rare (error) cards will probably be more valuable over time."

Well, not necessarily. One could draw a parallel to the proliferation of error cards in the sports card industry in the early 1990s.



The card on the left is the card that was mistakenly inserted into some of the print run for card No. 87 in Inkworks' "Men in Black" set. The corrected card on the right features Frank the Pug dog on the front. According to Inkworks, the number of the corrected cards far outnumber the number of error cards in the print run.

While initially the error cards were sought after making them more valuable, over time the errors lost value, became just as valuable as the regular cards, even when the error card was of a superstar player.

For example, all you have to do is look at San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana's error 1990 Fleer card. Both the error and corrected version are currently listed for only 15 cents in price guides.

Each company has said in press releases and through company personnel that these truly were errors and were not planned. And for each company, it better be. Collectors don't like to be misled, especially if it is being done intentionally.

While a company may earn some short-term gain by having collectors chase for these cards, the company would lose respectability in the long run if it continued to make mistakes.

The Rugrats are back: News has it that Australia's Tempo card company will release "Rugrats" card set in the United States in August.

According to the information, the series contains 96 cards which feature scenes from the Nickelodeon animated show. The set breaks down into 17 Character cards, 54 Episode and 27 cards which chronicle the "Touchdown Tommy" and "The Trial" episodes.

Other features include a Klakker card, nine Hanging Mobile cards, seven Character Stand-Ups, four Caught in the Act cards and four Rugrat Recall: Spot the Difference cards.

If you're looking for the set, don't bother calling Kitchen Sink. The company, which was distributing Tempo's products in the United States, severed ties with Tempo earlier this year.

At one time, Comic Images was in the running for the "Rugrats" license in the United States but lost interest in the product after the company spoke to a few major retails and distributors who said the product wouldn't sell.

The National: It maybe called the National Sports Collectors Convention, but a non-sport flavor did take over the show.

According to Krause Publications' Trade Fax, Group Seven Communications, the parent company for Sports Time, entered into an agreement which would allow Group Seven's unparalleled leadership in future Nationals.

The agreement occurred after Group Seven helped the NSCC raise quickly-needed capital to open this year's National.

As for the show itself, Sports Time was the only company with entertainment cards to make an appearance. Fleer/SkyBox, Topps and Upper Deck all balked this show for various reasons. In addition, Inkworks president Allan Caplan attended the show's opening days, along with a handful of dealers.

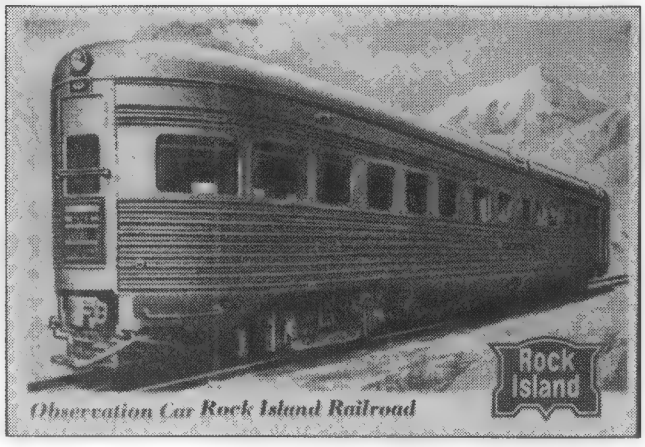
As for bargains, they were few and far between. Many dealers were still pushing items from two seasons ago which still haven't sold.

There was plenty of older material at good prices. The only item to catch my interest was Tempo's Simpsons set.

A dealer was selling the entire set including the binder for $500, stating the price was reasonable because the oversized card is worth $200. With that argument, I quickly lost interest.

Entertainment Cards EXTRA
Turning Back the Clock

1955 Topps Rails And Sails



Cards in set: 200.

Card fronts: Detailed color artwork graced the front of each card. The train cards feature white borders, while the ship cards are borderless.

Card backs: Include artwork and a write-up describing the artwork on the card front. The backs also showcase a question and answer section. The train cards have the number in a semaphore in the upper left. The ship cards have the card number printed next to an anchor in the bottom left.

Card size: 2⅝ x 3¾ inches.

Set value: $1,400-$1,600.

Single card value (Card Nos. 1-80 and 131-150): $2-$3. Card Nos. 81-130 and 151-200: $8-$15.

Set notes: Some of the cards from the set were part of a Doeskin Tissues promotion. These cards have wide side borders, and the Doeskin name is listed on the back. For an unknown reason, 100 cards in the set (card Nos. 1-80 and 131-150) are much easier to find than another 100 cards (card Nos. 81-130 and 151-200).

1950-51 Topps Freedom's War

Cards in set: 203.

Card fronts: Color artwork and color photos are used and bordered in white. Some tanks were die-cut on the front.

Card backs: The set was issued in three series, all of which have differences in the card backs. The first have tan color backs. Cards in the third printing have gray backs. However, the tanks (card Nos. 97-103) were never produced on gray cardboard.

Card size: 2⅛ x 2⅝ inches.

Set value: $1,600-$1,800.

Set notes: Card Nos. 1-96 and 104-203 were produced with both tan and gray backs. The tank cards (Nos. 97-103) are found with tan backs only. In addition, tan-backed cards (Nos. 1-96) either have or do not have a caption on the front.

Also, the tank cards were produced with non-die-cut fronts and with die-cut fronts, and there were a few color variations.

Cards were sold as singles in one-cent packs, while five-cent packs contained three, two-card panels.

1968 Topps Flash Gordon

Cards in set: 24.

Card fronts: A black-and-white photo from the Buster Crabbe serial is bordered in white. A Saturn planet logo is located in the lower left inside a black stripe. The card's caption is printed in white.

Card backs: The card number and card caption are located in the upper left of the salmon-colored backs. A text box, which includes a write-up of the scene on the front, is printed on the left. A Flash Gordon drawing fills the right border of the card. Topps and King Features Syndicate copyrights are listed.

Card size: 2½ x 3½ inches.

Set value: $2,900-$3,500.

Single card price: $100-$125.

Set notes: This test set has been labeled as one of the most valuable sets of the modern era. For a set that was issued in the 1960s, it is unusual that so many unknowns surround it.

THE CARD SHARK

By Max Gottfried

'Land Before Time' figurines packaged with trading cards

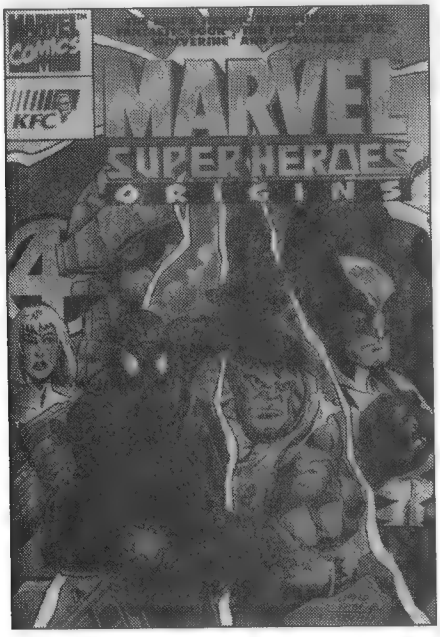
The Great White roaming the high seas of the rough trading card waters surfaces again with tasty morsels. The latest banquet of non-sports card nourishment may not be for everyone's appetite, but I'm sure many will find something to chew on.

Burger King celebrated "The Lost World: Jurassic Park" with a promotional tie-in of collectible watches. Topps took care of the conventional trading card release rather well, thank you.

One of 12 cards was included with each "Land Before Time" action toy at participating Burger King restaurants.

In order to satisfy the mothers of America and their hungry little tykes, Burger King also did a promotion with "The Land Before Time." PVC action toy dinosaurs kept the kids happy along with a trading card. One of 12 cards were distributed with some nice painted artwork on the front and a factual 'Dino-Quiz' on the back.

Kentucky Fried Chicken: OK, so the Colonel didn't produce any cards with any of his 11 herbs and spices. While Batmania captured the Taco Bell customers interest, with peel-off matching pieces and cute Batman toys, KFC distributed six different Kids Meal toys.



Packaged with each toy was a Marvel mini-comic. Some of you older card sharks may relate to the embarrassment of holding up a line of hungry customers while you explain to the teenage girl at the register that, "No, I already have the Wolverine Press n' Go car."

I want to hear from you. Tell us your embarrassing tale of woe. Did you wait six hours in the rain for an autographed card? How many Kids Meals did you have to go through to complete that set of cards/toys? How many times did you pretend you were "buying it for your nephew?"

C'mon, share your passion for collecting. I mean how bad can it compare to The Card Shark?

All entries will receive some of the coolest promo cards from the latest releases. The top three entries will be presented here in the Card Shark Column with each winner awarded one box each of the most sensational trading card product on the market.

Marvel mini-comics were included with Kids Meals at participating KFCs.

(Hey, when I get it, you get it. Got it?) The deadline is Oct. 31st so put pen to paper now. Send your entry to: Max Gottfried, 82-60 116th St. #CC3, Kew Gardens, N.Y. 11418.

Mike and Ike and Spider-Man: Most of the time I'm aware of new products on the market. Sharks have that keep sense and smell blood. But sometimes you're just plain lucky.

Take for instance, while going to see the latest Mel Gibson movie, Mrs. Card Shark passed a box of Mike & Ike candies to me. Even in the dark I could see the back of the package had a picture of Spidey and an instant win game.

Sorry, honey, I'll keep these, you can have the Junior Mints. Video games, subscriptions and a leather jacket were the prizes available.

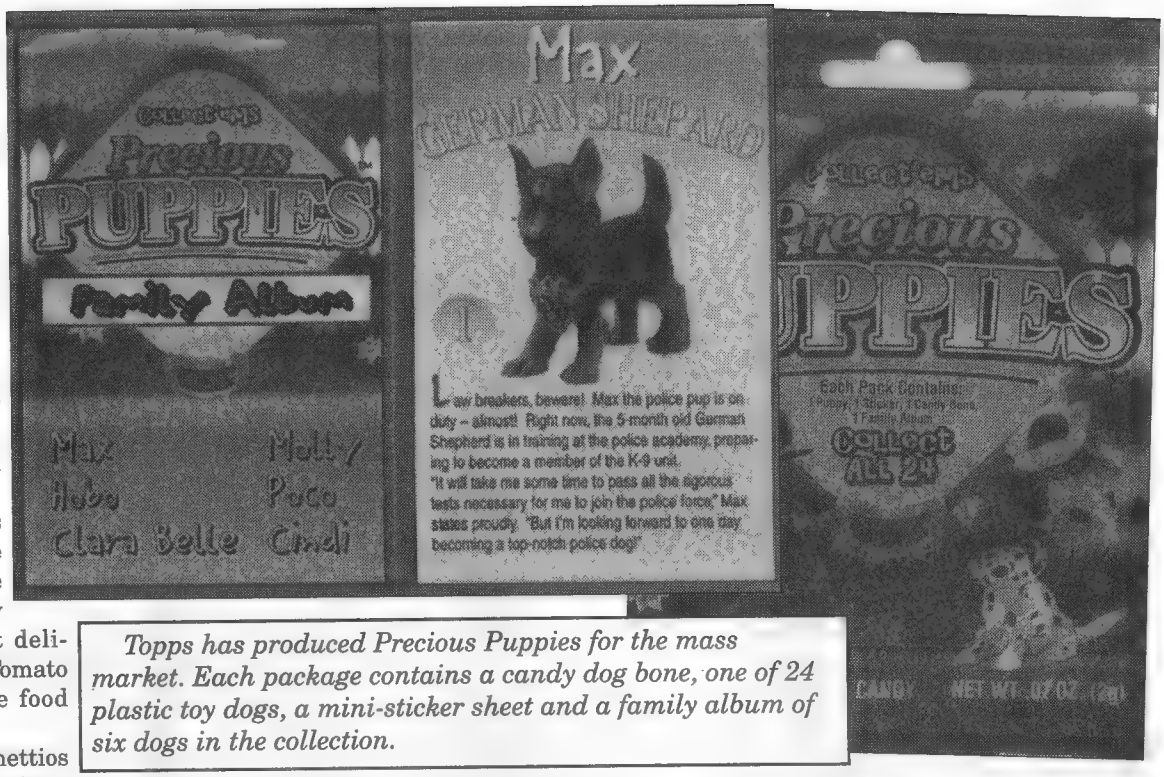
During a mush scene, I carefully opened the candy box to see if I was an instant winner. Not a winner this time, but if you collect enough of the "dots" — a Spider-Man emblem — they can be redeemed for all sorts of Spidey paraphernalia.

Precious Puppies from Topps: I've previously reported on some confectionary products, produced by Topps for mass markets, such as "Puppy In My Pocket."

Somebody must have bought the cute little things, because Precious Puppies is this year's entry product.

Each colorfully illustrated package contains: a candy dog bone, one of 24 plastic dogs in the collection.

I'm already hooked. Dog card No. 1 is named Max! They sell for about $1.50 each and are a great way of introducing younger collectors to the trading card hobby.



Topps has produced Precious Puppies for the mass market. Each package contains a candy dog bone, one of 24 plastic toy dogs, a mini-sticker sheet and a family album of six dogs in the collection.

Spaghettios Stickers: If you've whizzed past the aisle, you may have missed that delicious Pasta with Tomato and Cheese sauce food product.

Recently, Spaghettios hopped aboard the dinosaur craze with its own promotion. After neatly peeling away each label, you will now possess four prehistoric stickers featuring those ever popular giant lizards. To complete your collection of 20 stickers in all, you'll have to devour four more cans.

A recent discovery from the annual Non-Sports Card Show in Parsippany, N.J.: It is always nice rubbing elbows and exchanging stories with other non-sports card collectors.

Especially when it happens at this once-a-year event, where collectors and dealers from around the world gather over nothing except non-sports cards.

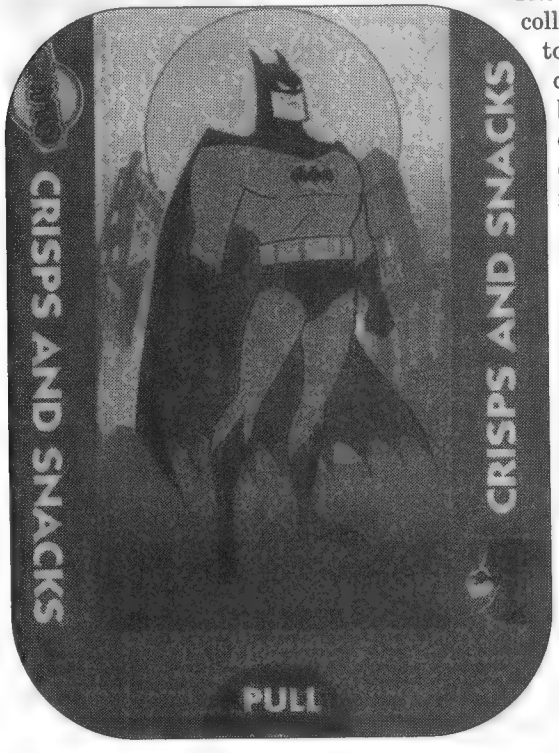
Older cards were very much in demand. We're talking pre-1970, the time before the chase card. Mars Attacks in high grade was one of the items on most want lists. In recent material, Babylon 5 was a hot potato.

The primary concern with both collectors and dealers continues to be the collation or breakdown of sets/bonus cards per box. Many were unhappy and downright angry toward the companies producing this material.

Hey, trading card manufacturers are you listening?

Besides finally completing my set of Comic Book Foldees (it took five years), I came across a fascinating Batman Animated card product. A pop-up insert from Tayto crisps and snacks issued in 1994.

A total of six feature the animated versions of Batman, Robin, Catwoman, Joker, Penguin and Mr. Freeze. By separating the perforation and pulling on the tab, each character popped up. A pretty cool find for 20 bucks.



You never know what you'll find at a card show. Max Gottfried found this Tayto crisps and snacks Batman Animated slide set.

Sometimes you just gotta say no: The former host of Entertainment Tonight and new age musician, John Tesh has a special treat for his listeners ... collectible cards!

Spaghettios is offering a 20-sticker set which features dinosaurs.

Yep, while you and your friends are groovin' to Tesh on the keyboards you can enjoy exchanging cards of a buff Tesh in a variety of athletic poses.

Wasn't this one of the prophecies Nostradamus warned us about?
